

01 Build Up Correct Values for Children

Parents and teachers need to provide support to children and youths, who are facing different kinds of information everyday, in order to help them to build up correct values:

One's deeds are consistent with one's words

Parents and teachers should set an example with their conduct for the children by exercising "deeds consistent with words" or by demonstrating examples. When parents donate money to charities, they can explain to their children the attitude they should have and the meaning of this conduct, allowing them to have a clear goal and judgments on value:

To differentiate between right and wrong

When an event happens, which is suitable to give as an example, parents can teach their children some correct concepts at this right moment, allowing children to learn what is right and what is wrong from practical event, thus enhancing their correct values.

A positive social network

In order to help children to build up a positive network, parents and teachers need to keep in contact, cooperate and participate in this work jointly.

To praise and appreciate

Not to award children immediately but to postpone their acquisition of satisfaction for one hour later and then for longer and longer time gradually; rewards are changing from physical goods to non-physical goods such as praise and appreciation etc.

To experience making mistake

Allow children to experience making mistake and allow them to know that things are not certain to succeed and failure is not shameful, so that they can learn from failure.

Good relationship

Build up a good relationship with the children in order that children are willing to accept parents and teachers' teachings.

When parents and teachers are dealing with adolescent children, they can refer to the following three points according to the development of body and mind of these children:

- Allow children to have appropriate degree of freedom, so that they can learn the correct values from practical experiences. After that, it will bring a higher degree of efficiency when their parents and teachers instruct and guide them by their sides.
- In order to enhance the influence of decent friends on the children in the association, parents and teachers should encourage children to participate in association activities which are good for body and mind, thus enhancing their degree of participation and sense of responsibility in society.
- Communicate with children as their friends, allowing them to express in a relaxed manner on things which they do not understand and are not clear about, so as to enable them to clarify their thoughts.

Centre of Psycho-pedagogical Support & Special Education

Telephone: 28401010

