

What can I do to make Macau a better place?

Lam, Cheng Hei Ethan

Can one live without a dream? It is sometimes my dream to be the chief executive of Macau in the future. By then, Macau will have become much better than it is now and I will be making it even better. Well, you may ask me where my confidence comes from. I can tell you that it comes from young people like myself. Macau cannot be a better place without us.

As a young person, what can I do to make Macau a better place? First, I should start with basic education. At school, I am learning computer coding and drawing with the use of the computer. Both subjects train me to be more creative and innovative. In recent years, education in Macau has been focusing on training young people to be independent and active learners. Therefore, I believe in today's young people and the future generation; I believe in myself. My creativity and innovation, together with others', will make Macau a very different city in the future.

In addition, young people should have positive development, both physically and mentally. Moreover, I must have unique ideas. However, I need to respect different opinions and accept constructive advice and suggestions. Macau is known for its peacefulness and harmony. Macau people are friendly and hospitable. Why? This is because we respect and accept differences. Therefore, I will try my best to preserve such traditional characteristics to make Macau a wonderful place in the world.

I believe that dogged determination can make a better me. Macau's progressive role in the development of the Greater Bay Area and the Belt and Road will provide the new generation with lots of opportunities, so we should equip ourselves to make the best use of the upcoming opportunities.

Young as I am, I am confident that Macau will continue to shine. Actions speak louder than words. So, I am going to put my words into practice to help make Macau a better place to live in.
